Years before he downplayed lead poisoning of children in public housing, de Blasio blasted NYCHA for lead paint failures

During a brief proceeding, prosecutor Patrick Egan told Judge Jed Rakoff he expected the fed's case against Simmons would take about two weeks. Rakoff set the trial date for Feb. 5.

Simmons — who recently went to rehab after testing positive for coke and pot while out on bail — said “I’m feeling good,” as he left the courtroom.

Asked about rehab, Stacey Richman, who repped Simmons during this court appearance, said he would continue with treatment.
